“ I have known Peter only a short time. I'm a retired a Marine Master Gunnery Sergeant and he was always sure to greet me and help me through the store. I'm shocked and deeply saddened by his passing. My most sincere condolences. It always hurts to lose a Marine.

“ Peter, I was so grateful that God put you in my life. You saw potential in me when others did not. Most importantly though, we shared the experience of military service and you helped me with my PTSD on several occasions.

It was an honor to know you sir and I know we will see each other again one day.

“ I was always brought up to believe it was never about how a person passes but how he lived. From someone who has buried three sons of my own I know this only to well. So when i write this it is the things i will miss.

Peter i am going to miss you buying Chuckles candy and your incessant need for black licorice. I am going to miss telling you jokes, hearing your stories of bikes and races, of your time being a homicide detective and your marine stories I will miss hearing of how you met your wife and your "cowboy days and the nickname "poptart."

Peter, you could light up a room when you walked in with your crooked smile. You made some of us feel safe when we worked with him because we knew you always had our back. I'm going to miss how you could talk to me and didn't just make me feel like a coworker but a friend. How you treated everyone that you met and interacted with that made each and everyone feel important.

I'm grateful for the things you taught me and how you gave my self esteem a boost when it came to my resin designs. I will never forget you Peter. You have and always will inspire me to be someone like you.

May you rest in peace, my friend.
Until we meet again,

“ Peter I am going to miss you everyday! You always knew when to call and brighten my day! Don't worry you are still ahead with both store on B2B's. You would be so proud I'm trying to carry your B2B drive at other locations. I will miss you so deeply and I know you will always watch out for me from above. I will see you again someday soon!
