“ Charles was not just a work colleague but also a dear friend. He would help me through my low times by just being there. And I think I may have helped him too. I will never forget the tribute he delivered at my retirement event. He was a special man with the gift of compassion and grace. Bless you, my friend. Paula Matuskey

Charles or Charlie as he was so affectionately called, was a mentor, teacher and most importantly a friend. He played an intricate role in my career and where I am today. He was there from the beginning until I could fly on my own. He was a very compassionate person with a heart to "Help". Charlie touched so many lives with his openness and love. He truly is missed!
He will never be forgotten!

Dr Marcantonio was a great professor/mentor/psychologist whose humanity was inspiring to many. I was fortunate to have met him at Montgomery College and he also served as one of my committee members/readers for my dissertation. His optimism and encouragement really made a difference. May his memory be a blessing- RDD
