“ You are in Granddaddys arms right now smiling ear to ear in a meadow of all the wild flowers he always picked for you. Watching down on all of us. We miss you, you are loved, and will always be in our hearts.

“ I want to share an experience I had these pass few days. I am grieving and will miss my mom and have shed tears but need to explain my smile. Dad liked to look at the stars and would always help me find the big dipper. So it is my nightly routine to stare at the night sky and stars and moon.

So this is why I smile. A couple nights before Mom died I saw a streak in the sky appearing to be falling towards the earth. Thought shooting star. A couple nights after she died, while staring at the same spot in the night sky I saw another streak but going in the opposite direction and appearing to go away from the earth. I will always believe the first was Dad coming for Mom and the second was the two of them leaving together. It is such a happy thought.
