

Daphne Elizabeth Moyer

October 7, 2003 - December 28, 2020

On Monday, December 28, 2020, Daphne Elizabeth Moyer, dearly loved daughter and granddaughter, passed away at the age of 17.

Daphne was born at Christiana Hospital in Newark, DE, and spent her first 10 years of life in Landenberg, PA, where she enjoyed frequent visits to Longwood Gardens. She moved to Kent County, MD in 2014, and lived in Chestertown, MD for the past five years. Daphne enjoyed the scenic views of the Chester River and loved to watch the wildlife of the Chesapeake Bay Area Daphne was predeceased by her Paternal Grandmother, Ursula Moyer, and her Great-Grandparents, Quincy and Shirley Blevins, and Walter and Lillian Warren. She is survived by her mother, Jennifer Warren, her father, Raymond Moyer, Grandparents Charles and Sharon White, and Richard Warren. Other family members who were close to Daphne include her Uncle, Chad White, Aunt and Uncle Dennis and Beth Smith, and close family friend and dearly loved caregiver Judy Skeffington, as well as many cousins, extended family, caregivers and friends.

Daphne faced many health challenges during her life, but faced all challenges with bravery and strength. Her sweet smile would light up the day of all who knew her. Daphne enjoyed taking strolls through parks and places of beauty, she loved to sit by the water and listen to the movement, whether it was the splash of a wave, the trickle of a fountain, or the babble of a stream. She'd often stick out a toe to enjoy the sensation of water moving across her foot. Daphne also loved the feeling of the breeze, and was known to lift up her arms to feel the breeze more fully. Daphne loved to listen to music, and going to concerts and shows. She enjoyed getting compliments on her beautiful, red hair. Her favorite thing was being near people she loved and connecting by offering a hand to hold, or a foot to rub. Her gentle, loving spirit was a gift to all who knew her.

Due to COVID-19 restrictions there will be a small, private service with Daphne's closest loved ones.

The family is requesting memorial donations in lieu of flowers to the Children's Tumor Foundation. Please go to join.ctf.org/daphnemoyer or mail donations to:

I recently watched mystery diagnosis and saw a beautiful soul who fought to live and 17 years later she now is resting in the arms of our LORD and SAVIOUR, a place where life is eternal.

I just watched medical mysteries 5 years later and came across this. I don't know if Daphnes family will see or not, but I wanted to say that she could not have wished for a better family. It was a pleasure to watch the photo montage and see how much you packed into her 17 years. To enable her to go sledging despite the equipment she needed, to take her to so many beautiful places that made me, a stranger on the internet, to see her enjoying. I feel sad that her life was short and full of hardships, but still think she packed in more than many in their whole life. I also completely believe that she is now with God and will never have to feel pain again, she will have her new perfect body in which she can run and play until she meets you again. I'm so sorry for your loss.

“ This picture of Daphne was taken on the day of Christmas by her mom Jenny. Daphne is the focal point. She was the focal point of Jenny’s life. We connected on social media due to a common thread called moyamoya. Jenny shared her life with Daphne with us on fb. I can say, I have seen her growing up here and she celebrated her 17th birthday this year. Daphne was funny and beautiful. She loved playing music and enjoyed her concerts. Purple was her favorite color. She enjoyed spending time outdoors. Jenny and Daphne visited longwood garden every year in spring, summer, fall, and in Christmas. I enjoyed the photographs and Daphne being in center. Jenny is a talented photographer and she captured beautiful memories through her camera. We communicated daily via our photographs. She ordered a special sled from Europe so that Daphne can sled. She found beaches that has ramps for wheelchairs so that Daphne can enjoy the water. Daphne loved dipping her feet in flowing water. Jenny has a fountain in her yard where Daphne enjoyed dipping her feet and listen to the birds. My heart is breaking to write that we lost Daphne a few days ago. I wish my friend Jenny finds the strength to deal with the loss. Daphne was her life, her world.

“ I only knew Daphne and her mom from walks around town, with each stop for a brief chat being a pleasant one. I'd leave each one with a fullness and a better understanding of what love looks like, since Daphne was full of the beauty of it, surrounded by it and obviously eased through her days because of it. It was a privilege to "know" her, and her mom, even just this tiny bit. Thank you for your presence in Chestertown.

“ I remember when I first started working with Daphne providing acupressure and various manual therapies to help alleviate some of her ailments. She had such a sweetness and kindness about her that I thoroughly enjoyed working with her. As she got comfortable with me, she showed more sides of herself and I could start to understand and communicate better with her...that was when I got to SEE her and Daphne is a beautiful spirit. And every now and then, I would receive one of those heart enduring smiles that Daphne would give...and it would melt my Heart ❤️. I think of her often and absolutely loved to go treat her and spend time with her...makes me wonder if I was the one actually doing the treatment.

“ I remember Daphne as a newborn child, pure, innocent and unburdened by the cares and woes of life. I remember the laughter in her baby eyes and the smile of her infant mouth

I remember her as a courageous fighter against an invisible foe, a monster that even the doctors could not defeat; who never gave up, even against formidable odds; who endured surgeries and medical procedures that would make the bravest of grown men and women tremble.

I remember her laughter as I would wheel her, like a whirlwind, around her house.

I remember the unconditional love she gave to Jenny, my daughter and her mother.

I remember her determination as she struggled to gain the mobility we take for granted.

I remember her love for all things soft and cuddly, for her love of Koti, Matsi, Neferatu, Isabelle, Sam and all the other animals, real and imaginary, who befriended her and watched over her.

I remember the love and happiness she brought to all who knew her.

I remember her fascination with chimes and bells and all things musical; how she loved hearing music and watching dancing

I remember the comfort and the joy she found in such simple pleasures as the touch of water on her feet, a snowflake melting on her nose or the stirring of her hair by a summer breeze.

I remember her love of nature, of the flowers, the birds, the sweet smell of blossoms in the spring.

I remember the beauty of the bond between her and her mother.

Nor can I ever forget the incredible magnitude and strength of my daughter's devotion to her beloved child.

And who could forget that gorgeous, flowing red hair?

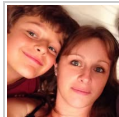

But, most of all, I remember Daphne for the inspiration, the insight, the awareness and the love she gave to me – the understanding and awareness of the feelings and emotions of those who are unable to express them in conventional ways, the insight that there is so much more to this world and this life than what appears on the surface, the inspiration to face what obstacles seem to confront me with confidence and with determination to meet whatever challenges they present. Like her spirit, freed from the earthly body in which it was held, these memories, these lessons, the hope and joy she inspired and the love she gave, will never die, but shall be with me all my days, forever more.

This is a beautiful post. I've just watched medical mysteries and found this. I watched the montage of photos and it is clear that Daphne couldn't have asked for better parents. She seems to have packed so much into her short 17 years and there were so many lovely photos. This post was beautiful and even as a stranger, it was lovely to read and learn about the things that she liked to do.

“ When Isabel and I met Daphne at Packard Hospital, it was clear to me that no matter what challenges she faced physically, Daphne's spirit was 100% awesome! A light shined out of that girl. And with a look, she could get her grandma to do what she wanted! Jenny and Daphne, sending our love to you from California.
