“ I lost my brother Roy Sunday. Separated by many miles and for many years, his loss is no less impactful. As boys Roy taught me to fish, crab, ride a bike and provided a steady example of a developing good citizen to follow. We are all in the end, the sum of our experiences, and Roy packed a great deal of them into his 73 years. As I reflected on our growing up during the most formative years I was struck by how much of Roy’s personality was like our grandfather Harry. Our granddad was a product of the Victorian period, and in some ways never became modern. Roy I think, would have been right at home in those days. He worked hard, took pride in his work and particularly enjoyed the peace and tranquillity of the woods, garden, or any exposure to nature in retirement. I pray that he is at peace, and with our parents in heaven. Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth, while the evil days come not, nor the years draw nigh, I have no pleasure in them; While the sun, or the light, or the moon, or the stars, be not darkened, nor the clouds return after the rain; In the day when the keepers of the house shall tremble, and the strong men shall bow themselves, and the grinders cease because they are few, and those that look out of the windows be darkened, Hand the doors shall be shut in the streets, when the sound of the grinding is low, and he shall rise up at the voice of the bird, and all the daughters of the music be brought low; Also when they shall be afraid of that which is high, and fears shall be in the way, and the almond tree shall flourish, and the grasshopper shall be a burden, and desire shall fail: because man goeth to his long home, and the mourners go about the streets: Or ever the silver cord be loosed, or the golden bowl be broken, or the pitcher be broken at the fountain, or the wheel broken at the cistern. Then shall dust return to the earth as it was: and the spirit shall return to God who gave it. Rest eternally my brother, I will see you again.
