“ Every time I ever thought of you, Mike, I remember you standing under the tree in front of my house in the front yard with that jean jacket and a mess of mousy brown hair. You had the face of an angel and there was genius behind those eyes. There was always "something" about you that made me like you no matter how your path twisted, and losing touch with you did make me sad for a time. I was so happy we reconnected, and I was hoping to see you soon. It's a sad reminder that we are not promised tomorrow. I wish I told you how special you were then. It's hard to think that you're gone and I can't tell you that now, to your face. Add this to my list of regrets. Rest in peace, Mike.
