“ Jim Orange was an institution around the tennis courts at Washington College. Everybody knew him as a loyal member of the tennis community. I appreciated that he was willing to take the time to offer a word of encouragement when I was frustrated with my tennis game. My condolences to Jim's family.

“ Coach Orange was a big help to my son when he played tennis at Washington College. He always had good advice and was a calming influence on the court. Jim was happy to see the parents and made us feel like we were part of the Washington College tennis family. While Jim had many personal accomplishments in tennis I am most impressed with his ability to make people feel important. He will be greatly missed but his legacy will live on in all the lives he helped to make better. Rest In Peace Jim.
