“ I know Aunt Jane through my dearest and oldest friend. She became a part of my life through her infectious joy, her delight in the simple act of being present. When my friend told me that Jane had passed away, she also told me how much Aunt Jane thought of me, and loved me. I thought, "I'm not worthy of this. Why would she love me?" And then I realized that to be true to my memory of her, I had to accept my worth as an object of her love. And embrace it gratefully. The world needs more Aunt Janes. She was a blessing.

“ Aunt Jane was one of the finest, most lovely women I've ever known. Her life impacted me in ways I've yet to fully appreciate. She was a constant source of joy in my life and the void left by her passing is all encompassing. She told me so many times that she loved me "whole bunches" and those words, the memory of her laugh and her caring nurturing words of wisdom will forever echo in my heart me all the days of my life.
