A lifetime member of the Tred Avon Yacht Club, he was the last living member directly descended from a Founder of the Club, his father. He served on the Alumni Council of St. Andrew's School and was, for many years, his class representative at the SAS Alumni Association.

At the Country School in Easton, where all four of his children were graduated, he served for nine years as a trustee and was a member of the committee that drew the first plans for the beginning of the brick building that is the present school.
