“Buddy was a man you could count on, whether you were a friend or stranger. He liked people, and in that way he was a friend of the world. I'm sure that his good nature served him well in Korea, where, he told me, he knew how to "get things done.”

I can't count the times he straightened out my glasses, jumped my car when the battery was dead, or gave me a coat when the sun went down at Schooner's.

I'll not forget him because he gave me so much to remember.
