

Lloyd W. Moore

April 15, 1916 - February 20, 2010

Easton – Lloyd Williams Moore died on Saturday, February 20, 2010. She was 93.

Born Selina R. Williams in Spartanburg, SC, on April 15, 1916, she was the daughter of Lloyd William and Selina R. Williams. When her father was killed in WW I, her mother commemorated her late husband's life by changing her daughter's name to his, and thus she was called Lloyd all her life. She graduated from Converse College in Spartanburg, and then continued her education in Europe before the Second World War at Oxford University in England and at the University of Berlin, barely escaping Germany while the Nazis were cracking down allowing the departure of foreigners trapped in the country.

She worked for the Navy department during the war and married Joseph F. Moore, Jr. of Berryville, VA in 1941. They resided in Venezuela, Connecticut, Virginia, Hamburg, Germany, and London, England, as his job took them around much of the world, in addition to extensive personal travels.

She is survived by her three children: John Rixey Moore, Lloyd Williams Moore, and Selina Ravenel Moore; and her grandchildren: Joseph Lloyd Moore and Susanne Rixey Moore.

A brief graveside service is planned at Greenhill Cemetery in Berryville, Clarke County, VA at 12:30 p.m. on Friday, February 26, followed by a 1:00 pm memorial service at Grace's Episcopal Church in Berryville.

The family requests of anyone who may wish to commemorate Lloyd's long life, that in lieu of flowers, they consider making a modest contribution to the Henry Edmund Ravenel Memorial Scholarship Fund at Converse College, 580 East Main Street, Spartanburg, SC.

“ Selina,
You have my sympathy. Your mother was a lady in all respects and I will always remember her sense of humor and smile. She brightened many of my days while I was working at the Gardens.##imported-begin##Susan Marva##imported-end##
