“Marguerite was kind...whenever I went to visit her she always offered a peppermint or one of her chocolates (supplied by Elizabeth).

She did not cheat...Marguerite and I played many hands of Double Solitaire and Crazy 8's. After winning 6 games of Crazy 8's in a row, I accused her of cheating (teasing). She looked at me and said, "I do NOT cheat!" She did not boast when she won. However, her eyes would twinkle and she would give a smile or even a quiet chuckle.

She was a lady...As she progressively lost strength, mobility, energy and personal privacy, Marguerite rarely complained and always said, "Thank you". It was important to her to look clean, neat & "put together".

Marguerite was a treasure...I am grateful to have shared time with her.
