“ I thought the preacher at Margie’s funeral was great. The message that rang in my ears was clear. How we should remember Margie? What is the first thing that pops into your head when you hear her name? For me, it was interesting to hear others talk about her zest for life and love for animals as it relates to my first experience with Margie.

It was December 2006 when we moved into the neighborhood. The following spring when the weather turned, the grass grew and the birds chirped - it was time for a walk - down to the marina. There was Margie playing ball in the open-field with Cole. At the time, I did not know it was Margie as we had never met. I had never seen a dog so happy. The dog came running through the field frothing with the ball in his mouth. The Saliva emanating from Cole was thick, white and effervescent. This did not bother Margie one bit as she wore a latex cover protecting her hand and half her arm.

To watch the dog’s spit roll off the ball as Margie hurled it through the air was a site to behold. To watch her not get any on her was even more impressive. That site proved to me her zest for life and love for animals. It was an awesome experience forever burned into my memory.

*Cheryl and I will miss her.##imported-begin##mark

“ Dear Family and Friends of Margie,
I am shocked and so saddened to hear this news. I had only recently had the pleasure to know Margie through my business. She was very kind to me and we hit it off right away. She invited me to her home and asked me to help her on some re-modeling/decorating that we postponed and tentatively planned for April/May. I thought it was so sweet of her to ask me to help her and enjoyed our visit in her home last November where we shared same interests for our love for our dogs and kyaking. She will be missed dearly, and I am so sad that my friendship ended all too soon. I will pray for your family to get through this sad time and lift you in strength. I will remember her for her warmth and friendliness. God Bless you and may Margie rest in peace.
