Pete was born at the U.S. Army Convalescent Hospital in Coral Gables, FL on July 8, 1945, the son of Sgt. Ward Atherton Merrell and Elaine Mettie (Wadsworth) Merrell. The hospital was originally the Biltmore Hotel in Coral Gables, and taken over by the U.S. Army Medical Corps during World War II. Pete was raised in Coral Gables, Boise, Idaho, Walla Walla, Washington and eventually in Vestal, New York while he was still in Elementary School. He graduated from Vestal Central School in 1963, where he won awards for his writing abilities and subsequently attended Syracuse University as a Journalism major. He met his future wife, Arlene (Arni) Wanda (Cowperthwaite) Merrell in 1966, and they were married on April 27, 1967, 10 days before he was assigned to the Navy Communications Station in Wahiawa, Hawaii. She joined him seven months later.

After his 2 years in Hawaii, he was assigned to the Navy Communications Station on San Vito Air Force Base in San Vito, Italy in July 1969. Pete and Arni welcomed their first child, a daughter, Nicole Elaine (Merrell) Rives in 1970 in Wiesbaden, Germany. Arni spent 3 weeks in Germany before being

In 1973 they welcomed their second child, a son, Christopher Rex Merrell who was born at the Naval Academy Hospital. Their next duty station was the Navy Communications Station at the Air Force Lajas Field Base, although the Navy Communications personnel were situated in the hills near there. Pete was an avid sports car enthusiast from his teens and belonged to a sports car club at each duty station. If the Base didn't have one, he started one. He enjoyed watching Formula 1 Grand Prix racing, NASCAR racing, and the truck racing of the up-and-coming NASCAR drivers.
